Jpepa a far bigger threat, says coalition

THE THREAT POSED by the Japan-Philippines Economic Partnership Agreement (Jpepa) is far bigger than the expected health hazard from the alleged dumping of Japanese toxic wastes.

The Jpepa will also affect ordinary Filipinos, said the [illegible] Junk Jpepa Coalition in a series of briefing papers on the Jpepa's alleged ill effects on fishermen, farmers, workers, migrants, the right to health and due process.

The Jpepa, which President Macapagal-Arroyo and then Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi signed in Helsinki in September 2006, has been billed as a "new-age" free trade agreement that will open unparalleled Japanese market access and investment for the Philippines.

However, the agreement, which has been submitted for ratification by the Senate, ran into controversy early on when environmentalists claimed that certain tariff-liberalizing provisions would open the way for the export of Japanese hazardous and toxic wastes to the Philippines.

Labor will be on the endangered list as Philippine conglomerates under the Jpepa will endanger the country's domestic agricultural and industrial producers, said Josua Mata of the Alliance of Progressive Labor, a member of the coalition.

"The free entry of low-cost products from Japan will result in the dependence of our agricultural and industrial sector on imported goods," Mata claimed.

The elimination of tariffs on almost all products will put the country's own industries at risk of closure which may result in massive unemployment, he said.

Mata said the proposed agreement clearly favored Japanese products. Local garments, appliances, automobile and auto parts stand to lose if Jpepa comes into force.

The Philippines has committed to eliminate all tariffs on agricultural and industrial goods except for rice and some rice products and salt.

Japan, the coalition pointed out, has excepted 651 agricultural products from tariff elimination. It was able to exempt 11 of its industrial products from tariff elimination and many were given gradual tariff schedules.

The Philippines has no tariff lines for exemption.

Dr. Aurora Parong of the Medical Action Group, another member of the coalition, said Jpepa will encourage the outmigration of Filipino health workers. [illegible]

Customs lowers its target by ₱5B

THE P329-BILLION revenue target of the Bureau of Customs has been reduced by P5 billion, according to Customs Commissioner Napoleon Morales.

Morales said the Development Budget Coordination Committee (DBCC) made the downward adjustment because of the continually strong rate of the peso's value against the dollar, which is the currency that is collected for imports.

"The DBCC realized that the assumption of foreign exchange rate from which our revenue target was based is not materializing. The Department of Finance has already computed that every P1 peso appreciation in the value of peso against the dollar would have a P2.2 billion negative impact for our collection. This factor is really beyond our control," Morales told reporters.

Morales explained that the original revenue target of the BOC was based on an exchange rate of P48 to the dollar. The adjusted P324-billion target is based on a rate of P46 to the dollar.

The customs bureau earlier appealed to the DBCC for a reduction in this year's collection target, citing "the nonmaterialization of assumptions of the target that included not only the exchange rate but also the volume of imports." Margaux C. Ortiz

Schwarzenegger, Gore star at UN summit

INQUIRER MEDICAL MISSION IN BAGUIO The first Newsboys Medical Mission of Philippine Daily Inquirer (PDI) and United Laboratories Inc. (UNILAB) was launched in Maharlika Hall along Session Road in Baguio City on September 14. A total of 146 newsvendors and 28 immediate family members were catered with the help of volunteer doctors, Inquirer and Baguio newspaper dealers, Navarro and Costes Families.

GOVERNOR Arnold Schwarzenegger of California AP

UNITED NATIONS—ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER and Al Gore, Republican and Democrat, shared the world spotlight to press for climate action, adding a touch of star quality to the staid proceedings of a UN summit.

The two headliners, the California governor and the former US vice president, also highlighted by their presence the absence of US President George W. Bush from the eight hours of high-level speechmaking on Monday on what to do about global warming.

Bush, who did take part later in a small, private UN dinner with key players on climate, rejects the idea of international treaty obligations to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide and other "greenhouse gases" blamed for global warming—an idea central to UN climate negotiations.

Fellow Republican Schwarzenegger, on the other hand, has taken the lead on introducing emissions caps at the US state level, signing legislation mandating such reductions in California.

"This responsibility we all have is action. Action, action, action," the former Hollywood action star said as he helped open the summit, winning warm applause from the assembled presidents and premiers.

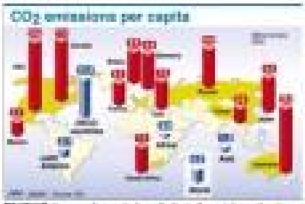

The Democrat Gore—a Hollywood figure himself as the lead in the Oscar-winning climate documentary "An Inconvenient Truth"—took his turn at a summit luncheon, where he cited a lengthening list of global warming's impacts, from the shrinking Arctic ice cap to disappearing lakes in Africa.

"The need to act is now," Gore told delegates to the one-day session, which drew more than 80 world leaders. "We need a mandate at Bali."

He was referring to the annual UN climate treaty conference, scheduled for December in Bali, Indonesia, where the Europeans and others hope to initiate talks for an emissions-reduction agreement to succeed the Kyoto Protocol in 2012.

The 175-nation Kyoto pact, which Washington rejects, requires 36 industrial nations to reduce the heat-trapping gases emitted by power plants and other industrial, agricultural and transportation sources. The 1997 agreement set relatively small target reductions averaging 5 percent below 1990 levels by 2012.

The advocates of emissions caps say a breakthrough is needed at Bali to ensure an uninterrupted transition from the Kyoto deal to a new, deeper-cutting regime. AP

Foundation awards 24 'genius grants'

CHICAGO—A WOMAN WHO helps students go to college with their "posse," a psychiatrist who treats combat veterans and a museum director on Alaska's Kodiak Island are among the 24 winners of this year's MacArthur Foundation "genius grants."

The $500,000 fellowships were announced Tuesday by the Chicago-based John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation. Recipients can use the money however they wish.

"It's an incredible gift," said Deborah Bial, 42, founder and president of the Posse Foundation, which helps form social networks that college students can turn to for support. "It will change my life and I hope it will change Posse's life."

Bial was working with New York City public school students in a leadership program when one of the program's alumni tried to explain to her why he struggled after high school. "He said, 'I never would have dropped out of college if I had my posse with me,'" she said.

The conversation inspired Bial, then 23, to create the program that identifies promising teenagers from urban environments and gets them pre-college training in small groups with other students—their "posse"—destined for the same school.

Since then, the New York-based foundation has placed nearly 2,000 students from six cities at 28 colleges. They graduate at a rate of more than 90 percent.

"I feel like the luckiest person in the world because I love what I do," Bial said. "It was serendipity—I was in the right place at the right time with a kid who had a good idea."

Since 1981, the MacArthur Foundation has named 756 fellows, recommended to the foundation's board by a 12-member selection committee.

Other winners of this year's fellowships include a blues musician, a painter, a playwright, an inventor, a medieval historian, a forensic anthropologist who investigates human rights violations, a biomedical scientist studying how to temporarily reduce metabolism and a spider silk biologist researching new synthetic materials. avoided seriously grappling with the issue of climate change, often perceiving it as simply a problem for heavy polluters, the study found.

Also, the complacency at many levels of the region's financial system has made it vulnerable to any reversal of the strong stock market performance.

"There has been a palpable lessening of the pressure for [illegible] governance reform around the region ... and many governments, regulators and market participants have taken their eye off the governance ball," it said.

The report studied 582 listed companies in 11 Asian markets and examined the governance performance based on the rights, transparency, independence, responsibility, accountability, fairness and environmental responsibility.

It found that the average corporate governance score for companies in Asia, not including Japan, only rose by 1.5 points.

Companies had also failed to acknowledge their impact on climate change.

"It has not yet sunk in for most corporate managers in Asia that whatever business one is in, it will have a carbon footprint," said Simon Gill from CLSA, author of the report. "With a carbon footprint comes the responsibility to minimize, if not actually negate the cost of carbon emissions."

Gill said that unless companies recognize their role in carbon emissions, they could be caught out by consumer actions in western countries placing pressure on companies they supply to conform to higher standards. AFP strengthening of resources, including our people, technology and tools, and audit methodology, to keep us fully equipped in a highly competitive environment.

Where innovation and strategic thinking are essential, our proactive leadership in each of our institutions will bring about transformation that is responsive to business strategy and change. Deep learning and excellent performance will continue as dynamic elements of our work discipline. Our high standards of ethics and integrity will be upheld relentlessly in performing our stewardship role of building public trust.

The 7th Annual National Convention Committee is giving members another meaningful convention. With the theme: "Keeping the high grade in a very challenging practice environment", learning will be enriched with the blend of knowledge and experience of the resource speakers and delegates who will share their insights in the discussions.

Audit risk management

The changing business environment and growing demands of the stakeholders, both global and local, have placed greater emphasis on risk management as it relates to the accounting profession. To a certain extent, this has put a strain on the resources of the auditing firms but this has become necessary for compliance with the auditing standards and requirements of the regulatory agencies, and more importantly in managing risks which could ultimately threaten one's practice. This will be discussed Ms Sharon G. Dayoan, Risk Management Partner of KPMG Manabat Sanagustin & Co.

'Tax updates'

Presented by lawyer Nelson M. Aspe, OIC Deputy Commissioner, The Operations Group of the Bureau of Internal Revenue will enlighten the participants on R.A. 9480 otherwise known as the Tax Amnesty Law. The current tax amnesty program was launched through Republic Act No. 9480, which originated from a tax bill, which lapsed into law on May 24, 2007. Qualified taxpayers with tax assessments or potential tax liabilities or those who just want to buy peace of mind or avoid hassles of tax investigations can avail of the tax amnesty by paying an amnesty tax.

'ISA Requirement and Fraud Consideration in Our Audit'

Presented by Mr Roderick M. Danao, Partner, Isla Lipana & Co./PricewaterhouseCoopers. He will share with the participants on ISA requirements, common fraud schemes in the Philippines, fraud drivers and anti-fraud controls, audit procedures to address fraud.

'SEC updates'

Presented by Ms Ma. Cresta F. Casals, OIC. The Office of the General Accountant of the Securities and Exchange Commission, will include the transitional and implementation issues on International Financial Reporting Standards. It will emphasize the findings of deficiencies observed on the bases of the 2006 audited financial statements submitted by corporations, recent guidelines and policies to the submission of financial reports, and accreditation of external auditors and developments.

Light moments with Mr. Francis J. Kong, president, Inspire Inc. He will enlighten the participants on "Living the good life".

The Practitioners' Forum on "Philippine Financial Reporting Standards for Small and Medium-sized Entities" will be discussed by Ms Ma. Cecilia F. Ocio, Partner – Manabat, Delgado, Amper & Co./Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu. She will focus on a proposed standard to provide a simplified, self-contained set of accounting principles that are appropriate for small and medium-sized, non-listed companies and are based on full IFRSs. Commentaries and insights will be contributed by ACPAPP members who are practitioners from Metro Manila, Visayas and Mindanao, in particular, their experiences with small and medium enterprises that are their clients.

DENGUE: Knowing the enemy

Dengue fever and dengue hemorrhagic fever (DHF) are acute febrile diseases, found in the tropics, with a geographical spread similar to malaria. One major difference, however, is that malaria is often eradicated in major cities, whereas dengue is often found in urban areas of developed tropical nations, like Singapore. Caused by one of four closely related virus serotypes of the genus Flavivirus, family Flaviviridae, each serotype is sufficiently different that there is no cross-protection and epidemics caused by multiple serotypes (hyperendemicity) can occur. Dengue is transmitted to humans by the Aedes aegypti (rarely Aedes albopictus) mosquito, which feeds during the day.

Signs and symptoms

This infectious disease is manifested by a sudden onset of fever, with severe headache, muscle and joint pains (myalgias and arthralgias - severe pain gives it the name break-bone fever or bonecrusher disease) and rashes; the dengue rash is characteristically bright red petechiae and usually appears first on the lower limbs and the chest - in some patients, it spreads to cover most of the body. There may also be gastritis with some combination of associated abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting or diarrhea.

Some cases develop much milder symptoms which can, when no rash is present, be misdiagnosed as influenza or other viral infection. Thus travelers from tropical areas may inadvertently pass on dengue in their home countries, having not been properly diagnosed at the height of their illness. Patients with dengue can only pass on the infection through mosquitoes or blood products while they are still febrile.

The classic dengue fever lasts about six to seven days, with a smaller peak of fever at the trailing end of the fever (the so-called "biphasic pattern"). Clinically, the platelet count will drop until the patient's temperature is normal.

Cases of DHF also show higher fever, haemorrhagic phenomena, thrombocytopenia, and haemoconcentration. A small proportion of cases lead to dengue shock syndrome (DSS) which has a high mortality rate.

Treatment

The mainstay of treatment is supportive therapy. Increased oral fluid intake is recommended to prevent dehydration. Supplementation with intravenous fluids may be necessary to prevent dehydration and significant hemoconcentration if the patient is unable to maintain oral intake. A platelet transfusion is indicated in rare cases if the platelet level drops significantly (below 20,000) or if there is significant bleeding.

The presence of melena may indicate internal gastrointestinal bleeding requiring platelet and/or red blood cell transfusion.

It is very important to avoid aspirin and non-steroidal anti-inflammatory medications. These drugs are often used to treat pain and fever though in this case they may actually aggravate the bleeding tendency associated with some of these infections. Patients should receive instead acetaminophen preparations to deal with these symptoms if dengue is suspected.

Prevention

Primary prevention of dengue mainly resides in eliminating or reducing the mosquito vector for dengue. While spraying for mosquitoes is the most important aspect of the vector. Application of larvicides to standing water is more effective in the long term control of mosquitoes. Initiatives to eradicate pools of standing water (such as in flowerpots) have proven useful in controlling mosquito-borne diseases. Personal prevention consists of the use of mosquito nets, repellents, covering exposed skin, use bednets, and avoiding endemic areas.

ASIDE FROM DISCOVERING new fashion haunts, the Shop Shooters drop by our favorite stores from time to time to check out updates and the new things they have to offer.

A visit to Freeway's SM The Block branch was a colorful experience. Owner [illegible] told us about their new collection. "Our new clothes are quite colorful in hues and prints with lots of tunic and mini dresses to match with skinny bottoms like leggings or cigarette denims. They're fun and flattering."

Like glam dolls, we dressed their mannequins in pieces from their racks. Here are our picks.

Freeway has branches in your favorite malls nationwide.

MULTICOLORED knit zigzag print mini dress (P[illegible]) over a black bandeau (P[illegible]).

BROWN and yellow layered cotton tops (P[illegible]) paired with skinny denim jeans (P1,[illegible]) and a rhinestone-studded necklace (P[illegible])

BLACK cotton knit halter top (P[illegible]), [illegible] and skinny denim jeans (P1,[illegible])

GRAY [illegible] dress (P[illegible]) and black leggings (P[illegible])

THE ROCK STARS from UP Diliman take center stage.

Sweet victory

By Ruth L. Navarra

VICTORY is sweeter after a long drought.

The University of the Philippines Pep Squad knows this more than any other cheering squad in the University Athletic Association of the Philippines.

The fiery squad from Diliman recently became the champions of the 2007 Samsung Cheering Competition, a title it last held five years ago when the University of Santo Tomas Salinggawi Dance Troupe (SDT) ended its three-year reign.

Now, it's UP Pep's turn to return the favor as it dashed SDT's dream of having a six-peat.

"We were so happy because of the overwhelming support of the whole UP community. After we've performed our routine, we felt like all the sacrifices we made and the injuries we've endured had paid off," said UP Pep co-captain Pia Opinaldo.

With the squad members' "rock and roll" attitude, there was no stopping them from owning the floor as they performed their stunts seamlessly. In the spirit of their "rock" theme, the group got rid of maroon and green pompoms in favor of black ones.

The Squad earned a final score of 93.66, followed very closely by SDT with 92.16. The 1.5 difference showed how stiff and tough the competition was.

The last time scores were this close was in 2005, with SDT winning over UP by a hair's breadth—a .22 difference.

SDT turned retro with the boys' pompadour hairstyles and the girls' shining blonde wigs. The troupe earned a deduction after a mishap in one of its early pyramids. This marred an otherwise clean performance.

The second runner-up was the crowd-pleasing Far Eastern University Cheering Squad with a 91.6 average. The Morayta-based squad got the most applause from different schools as it entertained the crowd with a "Happy Feet"-themed routine.

The cheerdance competition continues to be one of the most attended UAAP events, with over 20,000 people inside Araneta Coliseum this year. Tickets are usually sold out in a matter of hours, with those originally priced at P120 going as high as P1,500. It's a lucrative business for scalpers.

Onboard Philippines seeks to make the Philippines a prime surfing destination

By Mike Mark H. Saldua
2BU Correspondent

BEACHES WITH POWDER-white sands, amazingly clean and clear waters perfect for scuba-diving, plus a wide variety of marine life accessible through snorkeling. These are just some of the reasons why many tourists plane to the Philippines.

Now get ready to add surfing to the list of reasons.

And why not? Our vibrant rainy climate is perfect. We've got a coastline twice as long as that of the United States. And at least a dozen new spectacular breaks can be discovered every season.

Still not convinced? Maybe the recently launched campaign called Onboard Philippines will do the trick.

Onboard Philippines is a partnership between the Philippine Department of Tourism and Aloha Board Sports, Inc., a leading surfing advocate led by aloha entrepreneur Freddy Gonzales. Backed up by Summary team member, Tourism Secretary Ace Durano, the group also has the support of Bali Pilipino and world renowned Pinoy surfer Mikala Jones; local entrepreneur and free surfer Paolo Soler; long-board women and architect Nikki Dela Paz; Top 50 WQS circuit and 2003 ECLA surfer Luz Ybañez; first place MSA longboard competition 2007 winner Buji Libarnes; and professional yoga and surf instructor Carey Wells.

ONBOARD Philippines Team

The ambitious campaign has set its eye not only on promoting the sport in the country, but in promoting the country as a surfing spot as well.

"In cooperation with the Department of Tourism, Onboard Philippines hopes to grow the local surfing industry, explore the numerous opportunities that it presents for Philippine tourism as well as empower and support the country's growing community of local surfers," explains 39-year-old Freddy.

They plan to travel all over the country and try out the local waves, while also searching for undiscovered waves, and thus spreading the word.

It is actually very exciting how given the country's coastline, numerous islands, warm and helpful people plus perfect weather, the Philippines can potentially secure a place in the international tourism map through Surfing Tourism.

Around the world, there are 17-23 million active surfers and they are more than willing to ride the waves of other destinations apart from Australia, Hawaii and California—the holy trinity of surf spots. And although the Philippines doesn't instantly come to mind at the mere mention of surfing, the country's uncrowded waves give the Philippines the potential to one day become another paradise for surfers.

Adventure tourism

According to Freddy, who started surfing during the early '90s, Surfing Tourism has become a significant component of the worldwide adventure tourism sector. "It's growing to become a multi-billion dollar global business that the Philippines can easily be part of," he says.

In the next few months, Freddy and his friends will be climbing their boards to different parts of the country to surf, but this isn't the only thing that they'll be doing. They will also promote other board sports such as skateboarding and skimboarding, which is hugely popular in Lipa, Batangas and Cebu. They will teach the locals about the sport and demonstrate the basics.

And because they are committed to protecting the environment that makes it possible for them to surf, they will perform cleanups and educate the locals on taking care of the environment too.

As for promoting the country as the next big surfing destination, Onboard Philippines is confident that apart from our awesome waves, another edge of the Philippines among others is how "we have a lot of destinations that lure surfing fans with their monster swells and majestic waves. Popular among both local surfers and tourists who go here specifically for surfing are Siargao Island in Surigao del Norte, Baler in Aurora, Catanduanes, Daet in Camarines Norte, La Union, Samar, Siargao Island, Vigan in Ilocos Sur and Zambales."

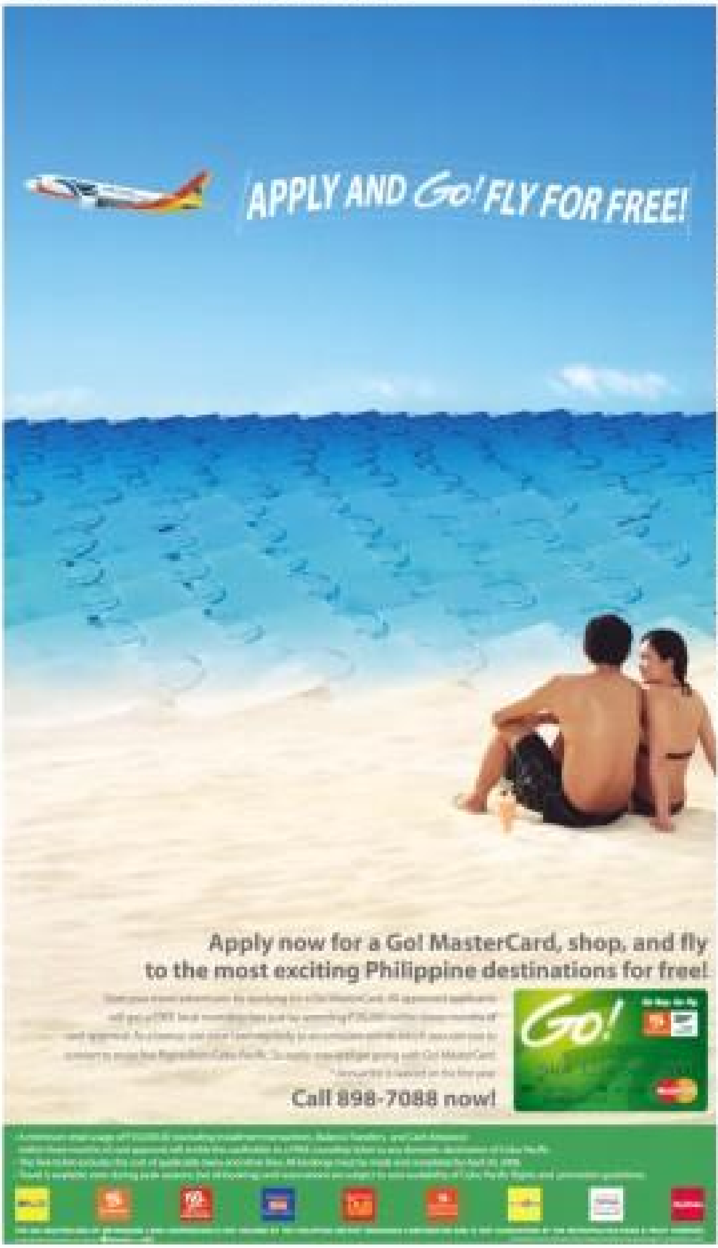

Of course, there are also the secret spots that some surfers selfishly keep to themselves. Surfers, after all, reputedly hate crowds.

But with this extensive traveling, the Onboard Philippines team will surely discover new spots and spread the good news.

ACCORDING to Onboard Philippines Summary team member and Tourism Secretary Ace Durano, we're running to let the surfing campaign and the country go far on high hopes for Surfing Tourism.

LEO'S DOCU FOR PLANET EARTH

ARE drought, famine, severe flooding, hurricanes and mild sun-related incidents? The documentary "The 11th Hour," produced and co-narrated by Leonardo DiCaprio, right, describes how human activity adversely affects the earth's ecosystems and what can be done to reverse the course. The docu features dialogues with world experts, including former Soviet Prime Minister Mikhail Gorbachev, renowned scientist Stephen Hawking, former CIA head R. James Woolsey and sustainable design experts William McDonough and Bruce Mau. The docu, distributed by Warner Bros. Pictures, opens soon in Metro Manila.
